

Under no circumstances do I wish to have the wisconsin no call list changed unless it is to strengthen the restrictions!!!!

wisconsin citizens have very clearly made their desires known on this issue by making the effort to register on a list. The large number of registrants, who made a defined effort to register, should be heard and respected as a clear mandate that solicitation and invasion of privacy is not wanted by those who registered.

I, am a firm believer that my home and privacy are sacred and it is my right to make choices on this issue. I consider the telephone for which I pay monthly charges, to be an instrument of my convenience and choice, and that my choice to register as a 'no call' number should have firm legal standing.

My advice to the citizens of wisconsin who oppose those who continually try to abuse the no call list, is to vote with your own choices and to be verbal about it. Find out what banks in wisconsin are members of this conglomerate group (look in Journal-Sentinal article of 1-20-05), and call them. Then cancel your credit cards with them and withdraw funds, change banks, etc. Maybe then they will get the message. Right now, the banks in "the national association" are invisible behind the cloak of the national association who has filed the petition to change the wisconsin no call rules. Don't let them be invisible, and they may wish to change their approach.
